Abstract:

Astrology is often used as a tool for self-knowledge and understanding one's strengths and weaknesses, which can be applied to many different professions, especially in the legal field. While astrology can provide some information, it is important to note that it is not the sole basis for choosing a career or making important life decisions.

Key Words: Astrologers, Astrology, Tool, Professions, Legal, Communication, Career, Birth Chart, Planetary Positions, Planets, Saturn, Mars, Rahu, Saturn, Mercury, Kaaraka, Jupiter, Houses, The Politics, Justice, Court, Litigation, Speech, Kendra, Venus

Introduction:

Astrology may be suitable in helping you identify a specific area of legal expertise that suits your interests and characteristics. For example, if you have good communication skills, you might consider specializing in legal areas that require negotiation or mediation. Astrology can also be used to determine good times for career-related decisions or actions, such as starting a new law practice, applying for a job, or making an important career change. Understanding your astrological profile can help you better understand your strengths and areas for improvement, which can apply to any profession, including law.

Birth Chart Analysis:

Astrologers often analyze an individual's natal chart (also called natal chart) to better understand their personality, strengths, weaknesses, and potential career path. Planetary positions at the time of birth can be interpreted as hints about the areas of interest or aptitude.

Important Planets:

Saturn, Mars, Rahu, Saturn, Mercury is the "Kaaraka" planet of speech, Strength and courage come from Mars, The ability to make policies comes from Rahu, All these qualities are essential assets of a lawyer, Saturn is often associated with discipline this can demonstrate a good work ethic and ability to meet the needs of the legal profession. Rahu's influence may suggest an interest in solving unique or complex legal problems.

Mercury:

Mercury is often associated with communication and intelligence, which are important skills in the legal profession, A good Mercury placement can indicate the possibility of success as a lawyer or legal professional.

Jupiter:

Jupiter represents expansion and growth, Jupiter in a good position can suggest a successful legal career with many opportunities for advancement.

Important Houses:

The ninth house in the birth chart is associated with higher education, philosophy and legal matters. A strong presence of planets in this house may suggest a tendency towards a legal profession, The ninth house is associated with the politics, justice and the courts, if this house is related to the tenth house then the person will become a lawyer. The sixth house is the house of litigation, the second house is the house of speech, the lawyer must have a strong and influential voice or voice, the third house of the birth chart looks at books and records related to accounts, registers, old documents, etc. So, even if the relationship between the, second, Third, sixth and ninth houses/lord is strong, a person will still become a good and successful lawyer. The relationship of the third house and the tenth house will give auspicious results. Therefore, this house always occupies an auspicious position in the birth chart of lawyers.

Planets in the Houses:

The owner of the ninth Venus tends to the 2nd house, thus strengthening the 2nd house in communication, Mars is placed in the 11th house with Rahu and is in aspect with the more important planet Jupiter. Rahu is also well placed in the 11th house. Favorable combination of Mercury and Sun in the "Kendra" sign has also assisted the native in this career. In short, individuals who are well placed between Jupiter and Venus, establishing a connection with the 10th house and Mars, Rahu will be associated with the 6th house. Furthermore, the strength of the 2nd house helps The native is successful in the legal profession.

Transition and Progression:

Astrologers can also take into account current planetary transits and progressions to provide insight into favorable or difficult times for career decisions, job changes or Legal issues.

Special Position of Rahu:

Sometimes lawyers use false statements to win cases in favor of their clients and act diplomatically. Rahu is a “karaka” of these, If Rahu becomes strong and is related to Mercury, the house of speech or the sixth house/lord is the house of litigation, then the possibility of becoming a lawyer increases.

Other Yogas:

If Rahu, Saturn and Mars influence the sixth or twelfth house, then the person will become a criminal lawyer. If Mars has a relationship with Jupiter and Mercury is with Venus, exalted in the birth chart, then the person will be a good spokesperson and advocate. Jupiter in a good position .Such a person will not lie and becomes a good critic. He also makes reasonable decisions based on the arguments given. He will be an admirer of truth, rules and obligations due to the strong position of Jupiter and Moon in the birth chart; He will be wise and thoughtful due to the influence of Jupiter.

Direction:

Sometimes it is realized that despite the auspicious “yogas” formed in a person's birth chart, the person still does not get proper results. This is because he is not yet old enough to reap the benefits of auspicious directions and transits. So, he will be very lucky to reap the benefits in his life at the right age through yoga exercises and transits present in the birth chart. For example, if “Mahadasha” of the tenth lord, “Antardasha” of the ninth lord and “pratyantardasha” of the eleventh lord meet in his birth chart, then at his career age he will definitely be successful in his career. Yoga is created when the directions and transits meet at the right age in the birth chart. If law-related directions meet at professional age, it will be a good omen.

Conclusion:

Some attorneys may use astrological knowledge to better understand their clients, especially their personalities, communication styles, and preferences. Instead of relying on astrology to predict their career, some people use it as a tool for personal development and self-awareness. In the legal profession, building networks and relationships is very important. Although astrology does not offer specific advice in this area, it can help you understand your social strengths and communication style, which can be valuable in legal practice
