An Astronomical Look at Jupiter:

The fifth planet in our solar system is Jupiter, approximately 483 1/2 million miles away from the Sun. It is our largest planet, more than 300 times as massive as Earth, and has a diameter of 89,000 miles compared to the Earth's 8,000. Jupiter is a colossal world so big that it could contain the Earth and every other planet in our solar system, and still have lots of room to spare. At certain times (every 13 months or so) Jupiter is the most brilliant object in the sky, shining with a flashing white luster that rivals any star. (Available online: www.uptodateresearchpublication.com)

Jupiter completes its orbit around the Sun in a little less than 12 years. Like the Earth, it rotates on its own axis, and for a planet its size spins very quickly indeed. A day on Jupiter takes only nine hours and 50 1/2 minutes. Because it rotates so rapidly, Jupiter has a noticeable bulge at the equator.

Astronomers have long noticed that the distances between the planets in our solar system follow a definite sequence or formula (known as Bode's Law). Mercury, Venus, Earth, and Mars all follow this sequence. However, between Mars and Jupiter there is an enormous gap, and for years astronomers searched for a lost planet in this vacant space. On January 1, 1801, a very small body, an asteroid 485 miles in diameter, was discovered traveling in the orbit that was supposed to have a planet. Since that time thousands more asteroids have been discovered in this area, which is now known as the asteroid belt. One theory is that these particles are the result of the breaking up of an ancient planet in our solar system. Another theory is that the asteroids are part of a planet that has not yet formed. In 1973 Pioneer 10 discovered that Jupiter emits about twice the amount of heat that it receives from the Sun. Jupiter, therefore, has an internal heat source and is, in effect, a miniature sun. The famous astronomer Carl Sagan called Jupiter a "failed star," meaning that Jupiter is made up of the same elements as our Sun (hydrogen and helium), but it does not have planets the way our Sun does. However, it is theorized that Jupiter may once have been the center of its own planetary system, and possibly the parent of Mars, Venus, Earth and the lost planet that is now the asteroid belt. In 1979 a new discovery about Jupiter was made when Voyager 1 and Voyager 2 sent back pictures of dusty rings around the planet. (In the following ten years Voyager 2 found rings around Uranus and Neptune as well.) In December 1995, after a six-year journey, a probe from our spacecraft Galileo landed on Jupiter

Sagittarius, the ninth sign of the zodiac, is depicted as an Archer, but the Archer is not an ordinary Man drawing a bow. He is a centaur, that mythological creature who is half man and half horse. Sagittarius is the only astrological sign to have both a human and animal representation.

The constellation of Sagittarius, however, is not just any centaur. It is the great and wise Chiron, a son of the titan-god Saturn. Chiron was a friend and confidant of both gods and men. The gods taught Chiron the arts of medicine, hunting and riding, music, and prophecy. In turn, Chiron himself became a renowned teacher. Among his famous pupils were Achilles, Jason, Castor and Pollux, and Hercules. One day, while the great Hercules was hunting a dangerous boar, he accidentally struck Chiron in the knee with a poisonous shaft. Chiron suffered the agony of dying, but because he was immortal he could not die. Hercules promised to find Death to release him. On his journey Hercules came. Across poor Prometheus, chained throughout eternity to a rock where an eagle tore at his liver. The supreme god Jupiter had put a curse on Prometheus: his torture would last until someone of his own free will consented to suffer in his place. The dying Chiron took Prometheus's place. Thus, the curse was fulfilled. Chiron was allowed to die and Prometheus was set free by Hercules. After Chiron's death Jupiter rewarded his noble character by placing the heroic centaur among the stars, and he became the constellation of Sagittarius.

The twelfth and last sign of the zodiac is represented by two fishes, tied to one another although swimming in opposite directions. The two fishes in the water symbolize conflicting currents of emotion and hidden depths. The constellation of Pisces has been known as two Fishes as long ago as 2000 B.C. The Babylonian name for this constellation, Kun, has been translated as The Tails (of the fishes). Kun is also known as The Band or The Leash (the string that connects the two fishes). Tied to this leash were two fish goddesses, Anunitum and Simmah, who represented the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. In Greek mythology the Two Fishes are associated with the story of Venus and Cupid. A great and terrible monsterNamed Typhoon had a hundred dragon heads, eyes that shot fire, and a voice that was a combination of hissing snakes, bellowing bulls, and roaring lions. One day Venus (goddess of love and beauty) and heron Cupid were walking along the Euphrates River whenTyphoon suddenly appeared. His hundred heads flicked dark tongues and the eyes flashed fire. Typhoon was intention the goddess's and her son's destruction. Terrified and unable to flee, Venus called on her father Jupiter for help. Jupiter quickly changed Venus and Cupid into two fishes, And they jumped into the river and escaped. Another version of this story is that two brave fishes leapt out of the water to rescue Venus and Cupid and carry them off on their backs through the river to safety. As a reward, Minerva (the virgin goddess) placed the two fishes among theStars, where they became the constellation of Pisces. In Gocharam Jupiter is very good in 2, 5,1,7,9 and 11, 1-8-12 are exceedingly bad ill health, loss of wealth, death at times, change of residence

Conclusion:

When Jupiter is prominent in horoscope you tend to be well liked and popular, friendly, broadminded, and cheerful, successful in career and business. Jupiter can also be too much of a good thing, for its influence can make you extravagant, lazy and luxury-loving, profligate with money, and blindly optimistic. If things fall into your lap too easily, you never develop strength of character or spiritual wisdom. Jupiter is the planet of blessings blessings we must learn to use wisely.
